

<http://www.youtube.com/v/AbDipdwiVSU>

Irrelevancy is all the vogue of late, and getting more so. But wait, there is hope upon the hype-rizon. As reported here, previously, anchors are starting to push back against the omnipresence of celebrity "news" and its creeping into actual "newscasts." Here is further evidence (via New York Times):

There seems to be a new wave in the contrarian crossfire of television news on the subject of celebrity misdeeds. Jack Cafferty, the vinegary commentator on CNN and alumni of a legendary "Live at Five" team, was the latest example in a protest against the Lindsay Lohan news, right.

Rage Against the Teleprompter - The Lede - Breaking News - New York Times Blog

Let's hope this is a trend which catches fire across the land!