

Here's some more snaps, mostly from Pawn's birthday.

THE PATENT
AUTOOPERIPATETIKOS
OR
WALKING DOLL

MARTIN & RUNYON,
00Pes, 239 Broadway, New York.

DIRECTIONS
TO BE OBSERVED IN USING THE PATENT AUTOOPERIPATETIKOS.

1st - In winding up, enter the board at the bottom with the thumb and finger of the left hand.
2nd - With the right wind up, turning the key from you, and then set it LIGHTLY ON ITS FACE.
3rd - In all cases handle it only by the waist or bottom board.
4th - If it should stop at any time, turn the feet toward you, and see if the inside leg is not caught against the foot.
5th - Do not wind it too tightly.

Autoperipatetikos, 1865
'Autoperipatetikos' means 'the automatic walking one'. The dolls walk by caterpillar movement held within a stiffened cloth body. Made in the USA by Martin and Runyun.

Following the visit to Museum of Childhood, Pawn reprised a stroll up Cambridge Heath to Vyner Street, first taken a decade ago. Where once there were scads of art galleries and artist studios, now evidence exists of just a couple of each.

Artist studio on Vyner St. The door was open, and a friend of the artist, at work with a sanding block, invited me in.

Creative graffiti along the roadway,

Last evening took Pawn and friend Miss R to dinner and a show, at Barbican. The show, as shown below, was works by composer Steve Reich, and a film, to a score by Reich, by Gerhardt Richter.

The first piece, Runner, was compelling and classic Reich. Richter's film, with Reich's score, was dense yet dreamy. It was like William Morris wallpaper was having illicit sex with an Egyptian scarab & a flapper's beaded dress, in the eye of a kaleidoscope. You know what I mean. Like a huge oriental rug which just couldn't decide how it should look, so keeps trying on new ones. Like that.
